

More Classes At Art Center

Classes that are still enrolling and scheduled to start after school vacation at the South Shore Art Center are in Sculpture, Figure Painting and Oriental Brush. Photography classes are scheduled to begin Monday, April 23 & Tuesday April 24 and a second section of Pastel Portraits with Constance Flavell Pratt will be offered, if enrollments are sufficient, by April 16th.

Sculpture with Polly Egelson will meet Wednesday afternoons from 12:30 - 3:30. Clay as a sculptural medium will be fully explored with students building their own armature and constructing figure, portrait and multi-figure pieces to be kiln fired; no previous instruction is necessary. Figure Painting with John Lanza will meet Wednesday evenings from 7:15 to 10:15 and will be an exploration of the human figure through the use of oil paints. Both classes can be taken for college credit through Mass Art.

Oriental Brush taught by Douglas Orr will meet Thursday nights from 7:30 to 10 and will be an introduction to brush painting through practice, demonstration and lectures with individual instruction to allow the student to develop their unique expressions.

Photography is taught by Linda Wasko through a lecture-demonstration method with students scheduling separate time in the darkroom for developing and working on techniques to develop a finer print. Beginners meet Monday evenings and Intermediate-advanced on Tuesdays.

Pastel Portraits with Constance Flavell Pratt is fully enrolled for the morning session but an afternoon session will be formed if enrollments are sufficient. Emphasis is on light and shade working from the model.
